PATRICK RONEY, John Holt and Francis Welch, Paſſengers on board the Sloop Diamond of New-York, Nathaniel Lawrence Commander, being ſeverally and duly ſworn on the holy Evangeliſts, depoſe, and ſay, that they ſailed from Port-Royal in the ſaid Sloop Diamond, the twenty third Day of December 1751, bound for Charles-Town in South-Carolina, that on the ſecond day of January following, being then off Cape Nicholas, they ſaw a Sloop coming out of the Mole, ſteering cloſe by the wind, which they took to be a Sloop bound to Boſton, that ſailed from Jamaica a ſmall time before them, that the ſaid ſloop got the wind of them, then bearing down within gun ſhot of them, they hoiſted a French pendant, the ſloop Diamond then put her helm a lee, and made ſail to the Northward, and was chaſed by the other ſloop, who being in our wake, fired a ſhot at us, captain Lawrence ſhortned ſail, and the ſaid ſloop on coming up with us, ordered our boat out immediately, but as we made no diſpatch, they directly hoiſted their own crafts out, mann'd with twelve or fourteen Spaniards and a Spaniſh officer, who took poſſeſſion of the ſaid ſloop Diamond, and carried her into Cape Nicholas Mole, that, upon our ſloop being carried under the ſtern of their commodore, called the Victoria, Don Domingo Santio Commander, were ſaluted with drums, trumpets, and loud huzzas, that as ſoon as we came to an anchor, the ſaid ſloop Diamond was boarded by the commodore's captain, and the captain that brought us into the ſaid Mole, whoſe names they would not diſcover, that they immediately ordered captain Lawrence's cheſt to be opened, and overhauled the governor's let-paſs and cuſtom-houſe clearances, and then overhauled the caſh in the ſaid cheſt, which we compute, amounted to about three thouſand pounds Jamaica currency, at the ſight of which money, the Spaniards ſhouted and danced for joy, that they took an account of the number of bags, and the marked contents, then put the money into the ſame cheſt again, and gave the key of it to captain Lawrence, and then went immediately on board the aforeſaid commodore, leaving a ſufficient guard of Spaniards on board the ſaid ſloop Diamond, that they ſoon after returned again, and ordered the ſame cheſt to be re-opened, and counted the looſe money that was in it, that they then overhauled all the cheſts in the veſſel, and took into their poſſeſſion all the caſh in general that was found in her, that the Spaniſh ſailors rummaged and plundered the ſteerage and hold, ſtripping the ſailors of all that they could poſſibly take from them; their officers likewiſe behaved very little better than pirates; that on the third of the ſaid January, the captain of the ſmall ſloop, and the commodore's lieutenant, whoſe names we could not learn, came on board captain Lawrence, and ordered all the priſoners to go on board a ſchooner, which they had taken two days before out of ſight of land, on her voyage from Philadelphia to Jamaica; but captain Lawrence inſiſting peremptorily, that he and his people would ſtay by his ſloop, and wait the iſſue of a trial, in order to proceed on his intended voyage if acquitted, the Spaniards left us for the preſent, but in the morning the aforeſaid Spaniſh officers compelled the above named Deponents, with five of captain Lawrence's ſailors to go on board the aforeſaid ſchooner, leaving captain Lawrence, his mate, and four ſailors on board his own ſloop; as ſoon as the aforeſaid paſſengers and ſailors were on board the ſaid ſchooner, the Spaniards ſent their craft, on board for the deponent Patrick Roney, and carried him on board the ſaid ſloop Diamond; that they there examined him from whence the ſaid ſloop Diamond came, and how the ſaid Spaniſh money came on board her, that this deponent told them, that the ſealed bags were money taken in on freight for South-Carolina, and thoſe unſealed was money for the returns of the ſaid ſloop's cargo from New-York, that they then drew up a writing on paper, and deſired the ſaid deponent Patrick Roney to ſign it, that on his refuſing to ſign the ſaid writing, they hail'd the commodore, who ordered the ſaid deponent Roney on board of him, that he was there threatned very hard to make him ſign it, that he then told them he was ignorant of what they wrote, and apprehended it was ſome villainy which they wanted to force him to ſign; that on his refuſal again to ſign it, the aforeſaid commodore Don Domingo Santio took the ſaid deponent by the ears, ſwearing, he would cut them off, if he did not ſign the aforeſaid paper, that after ſeveral threatnings of the like kind, he was forced to ſign it thro' fright and terror, tho' he did not underſtand one word of the contents; that he was then ordered on board the ſaid ſchooner, who weighed anchor, and ſailed for Jamaica, where we arrived on the 6th inſtant, &c.

Patrick Roney.

Jamaica, ff.

JOHN HOLT, one of the above deponents, being duly ſworn on the holy Evangeliſts, further depoſeth, and ſaith, that, at the time of the ſaid capture of the ſaid ſloop Diamond, he had on board the ſum of 275 l. Jamaica currency, which money, the ſaid Spaniards, as above related, took from him, and never delivered any part thereof to him.

John Holt.

London, Dec 26. We are informed from Cadiz of the arrival of commodore Rodney there, who went in ſearch of an iſland ſaid to be newly diſcovered: During the time of his cruize the fogs were ſo very conſtant and thick, that nothing can be determined from it, concerning the truth of the information given to the admiralty; and we hear the commodore is on his return home.

January 2. It appears upon enquiry, that ſeveral perſons have bred ſilk-worms with great ſucceſs in this country; ſo that there is no doubt, with proper encouragement, we might be enabled to raiſe as much ſilk here as would at leaſt ſupply our manufactures. This and the herring fiſhery would effectually employ and comfortably ſupport all the indigent perſons in this nation that are inclined to be induſtrious, and both might be carried to perfection at much leſs expence than is annually levied for the relief of the poor of London only.

Tueſday morning the corpſe of the late Sir William Gooch, Bart. brother to the biſhop of Ely, and who was 23 years lieutenant governor of Virginia, was carried from Spinham-

His Catholic majesty seems at length determined to make an expedition against the piratical states of Barbary, but principally against Algiers; being persuaded that this is the first necessary step towards retrieving the glory of the castilian flag, and the restoring the free commerce of his subjects, to which is attributed, those military preparations, and that naval armament, which might otherwise have occasioned many speculations.

Yesterday an express lately dispatched to Denmark, on account of the death of the queen, returned to the Cockpit, Whitehall, with some dispatches from that court.
